Welcoming Remarks

It's summer when the greenery is getting deeper. At this favorable time, You have come here. I am happy and grateful to hold the 2023 Asian Conference on Crisisonomy together with various organizations from Korea, China, Japan, and Pakistan, etc, including the AAC. Please pardon me the small capacity of my brain not to remember all the co-hosting organizations.

At this conference there have participated many researchers specializing in crisis management from around the world, including China, Japan, Mongolia, Nepal, Pakistan, United States, and Korea, in eight sessions. Once again, I would like to thank the presenters, debaters, and moderators who visited us both online and here in Jeju. Welcome to Jeju, an island of world peace. I expect that the wisdom shared here will achieve effective results in responding to the common crisis of humankind.

I would like to express my gratitude to my esteemed AAC President An Chen and former President Jae Eun Lee for their hard work. I would also like to express my gratitude to Chang Kil Lee, KACEM Chairperson and Seoyoung Kim, KAPAE Chairperson. Thank you for preparing for this grand conference. In addition, I would like to express my gratitude to Keiko Kitagawa, AAC Co-President, Gi Geun Yang, Vice President of AAC, and Ju Ho Lee, Director of Disaster Management Research Center and Loving Center for Disaster Victims.

Recently, there held a joint academic seminar of Research Institute for the Tamla culture, Jeju National University and National Crisis and Emergency Management Research Institute, Chungbuk National University. At that time, director Jae Eun Lee has said a precious message. I will conclude the opening speech with that word.

“Crisis management is a process that strives to realize human dignity.”

I heartly thank you, all of you working hard to realize human dignity.
